In 1915, the 85th Canadian Infantry Battalion Nova Scotia was established, consisting of brave men from various towns across the province. This battalion quickly became renowned for its unwavering bravery, camaraderie, and determination.

The Role of the 85th Battalion in World War I

During World War I, the 85th Battalion played a crucial role in several major battles. From the Battle of Vimy Ridge to the Battle of Passchendaele, these valiant soldiers consistently demonstrated their commitment to preserving freedom and justice.

One of their most notable achievements was the successful capture of Hill 70 near Lens, France, in August 1917. This strategic position was heavily fortified by the German forces, but the 85th Battalion's well-executed plans and audacity led to a significant victory.

The 85th Battalion Nova Scotia continued to fight tirelessly until the end of the war. Their unwavering resilience and remarkable battlefield achievements earned them a place in history as one of Canada's finest infantry battalions.

Post-World War I Contributions and Legacy

The end of World War I did not mark the end of the 85th Battalion's dedication to their nation. Many veterans returned home, carrying their sense of duty and commitment with them.

The battalion continued to serve their local communities, participating in various peacekeeping missions and lending support during times of crisis. Their actions not only strengthened community ties but also helped shape a more united and resilient Canada.

Commemoration and Remembrance

To honor the brave soldiers of the 85th Battalion, various memorials and commemorative events have been established across Nova Scotia. These serve as reminders of the sacrifices made and the invaluable contributions of these esteemed individuals.

Moreover, many historical societies and organizations actively promote the study and understanding of the 85th Battalion's history. By sharing their courageous acts and narratives, the memory of these heroes remains alive in the hearts and minds of future generations.

The history of the 85th Canadian Infantry Battalion Nova Scotia is a testament to the unwavering spirit and bravery of its soldiers. From their origins in World War I to their post-war contributions, these men left an indelible mark on both their province and Canada as a whole.

Remembering their sacrifices and stories ensures that their legacy lives on, inspiring future generations to strive for justice, freedom, and unity. The 85th Battalion's place in history is well-deserved and justly celebrated.
