In April 2012, the author and his wife Deb returned home from a cruise that had circumnavigated the world. It had been an adventure that lasted more than three months and changed their lives for ever.

Supposedly a retirement present to themselves it was a 'never to be repeated' holiday, but the memories and experiences had opened their minds far more than they could have imagined when they left on P&Os Aurora cruise ship in January. Within a couple of months of coming back home, they were seriously considering a repeat of that world cruise, and soon they were looking at the adverts and brochures again.

After various health issues that delayed the adventure, the couple finally set off from Southampton on 9th January 2017 on that same ship again, for their second voyage around the globe.

Would the experience be as good as the first time?

Relax into your comfortable chair, and start reading George and Deb's story as they spent the winter away from chilly Britain to sail across the oceans of the world.

Discover what it was like on such a long voyage aboard a cruise ship, the food, the entertainment and the friends they made.

Imagine the sights and experiences they had of the dazzling cities of Europe, Asia, Australasia and the Americas. Share their amazement of visiting deserts, the beauty of Pacific islands, the flora and fauna of rain forests, and the enormity of a volcano.

A world cruise is not a fortnight in the Mediterranean sunshine; it is an serious adventure to explore different areas of the planet, to peek at the cultures and architecture, to taste local foods, to dip your toes in the oceans, and look at the smiles on faces, and hear the laughter of people on five different continents.

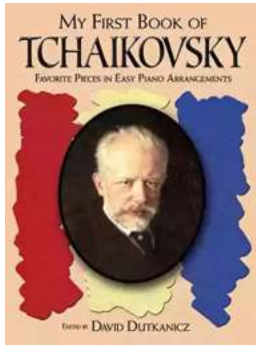

We live in a tiny fraction of our vast world, and there is so much out there to see, touch and savour.

Come with George and Deb as they search for new sunrises.
