Taiwan Blog Transmissions are accounts of places and people the author has met in Taiwan. The book is divided into three parts: “Taiwan Culture”, stories are about the unique situations of life in Taiwan from the prospective of an American Jew, “Food & Travel” pieces chosen from travel reviews he shared internationally on TripAdvisor, and “Labor & Politics” articles that highlight the spirit of social activism that he carried to Taiwan from New York City. The stories are uncompromisingly non-mainstream. This is an eclectic collection of stories written about Taiwan, no holds barred. The author exposes the foibles of expats, introduces places to eat and travel around Taiwan and the region, and shows a side of expat life in Taiwan. He lays bare the anti-worker policies of the Taiwanese government with an eye on the island's lurking eight hundred pound gorilla; the United States government.
