PRE-COLOMBIAN PLANE:
The delta-winged object at right, crafted of gold, was found in Central America and has been dated to A.D. 500 to 800. Some scientists call the tiny piece a zoomorph, saying it is designed to represent an animal, but it bears an obvious resemblance to a 20th century airplane; it even seems to include a pilot's seat. Such an aircraft would have made an ideal vehicle from which to view the famed Nazca lines formed on the high desert plains of Peru.
