This collection of eight short reads/short stories includes one hour stories from before, during, and after the reality of Colonel Kennedy's safe haven called the S-Line. These are the stories between the books of the trilogy: "Beyond the Strandline"; "Following the Strandline" & "Keeping the Strandline" The end of the world came in different ways for different people when the solar storm burned the grid to ashes. For Tesla Lane and her sisters the end came a week later. It came on a narrow bridge in the West Virginia Hills when bloody kidnappers ripped their mother out of the family car and out of their lives. "Make him take you, your father, make him take you to the S-Line! You'll be safe at the ranch! All the way to your grandfather's. Go!" It is the last thing Cybill Lane screams as they drag her into the mountains. But it's so far . . . And Tess has to grow up fast—for her sisters, for her father—because there are miles and miles of chaos and hunger, desperation and madness between the bridge and safety. But once they reach the ranch, who and what will be waiting there and how long will it be before Mother joins them there?
