- Fragrance oils
- Color dyes
- Soap molds

- Wax

Once you have all your materials ready, it's time to move on to the next step!

Step 2: Melting the Wax

To start, you'll need to melt the wax. You can either use a double boiler on the stove or a microwave-safe container. If using the microwave, make sure to heat it in short bursts, stirring in between, to prevent overheating.

Once the wax has melted, use your thermometer to check its temperature. Different waxes require different melting temperatures, so it's essential to follow the instructions provided with your specific wax.

Step 3: Adding Color and Fragrance

After the wax has reached the desired temperature, it's time to add color dyes and fragrance oils. Start by adding a small amount of dye and stirring well to distribute the color evenly. Remember, a little goes a long way with color dyes, so be conservative at first. If you want a deeper color, you can always add more later.

Next, add your chosen fragrance oils. Again, start with a small amount and gradually increase until you achieve the desired scent strength. Stir the mixture gently to disperse the fragrance throughout the wax.

Step 4: Preparing the Molds

While the wax is still liquid, carefully pour it into your soap molds. Ensure that the wick is centered in each mold and held in place with a wick sustainer. You can also use a bit of melted wax to secure the wick at the bottom of the mold.

Allow the wax to cool and solidify. This process may take several hours, so be patient. Once the candles are completely hardened, gently remove them from the molds.

Step 5: Enjoy Your Homemade Soap Candles

Congratulations! You've successfully created your very own soap candles. Take a moment to admire their beauty and enjoy the sweet scent that fills the air. Light one up, basking in the warm glow and the soothing aroma. You can also gift your creations to friends and family, knowing that each candle was made with love and care.
